

Dear FCC,

I am a newcomer to XM satellite radio, purchasing their products & services because of the wide range of options they offer. Local traffic & weather information being a major part of that. Being near a major metropolitan area like Chicago, I regularly rely on these reports on in my daily life. XM allows the best possible service in that respect and that's makes up a great deal of why I pay for it. Cable & satellite television providers include local broadcasts into their service packages and satellite radio should be no different. I'm upset I even have to fight for this. The NAB shouldn't be bothering our government with issues like this, they have a war on terrorism to deal with. On top of this, they have no right to do so.

Sincerely,
Robert Kaczmarczyk
